

Using Fiverr for All Your Design Work

Fiverr is a GREAT place to any sort of design work done.

- Image editing
- Image enhancement
- Product photography
- Package label design

It's incredibly cheap, but very high quality. There are even product photographers who specialise in taking high quality photos for Amazon, for just $5!

I have been using Fiverr since way before I was an Amazon seller and it's my go-to place for any sort of design work. What's the point of paying top prices when you can get the same quality for rock bottom!

NOTE: I often leave a tip for the seller if he/she has done a great job 😊

<https://www.fiverr.com/>

How to choose a gig on Fiverr

- Use the search bar to find the type of gig you are looking for
- Leave the default display by 'Relevance'
- Check the star rating and number of reviews on a gig (you want 5 stars and at least 25 reviews)
- When ordering a gig, be SURE to give the seller all the information you need
- Check in daily while your gig is being prepared, because often the seller will have questions.

Amazon's product photography service

Costs more than Fiverr, but it's convenient because Amazon will take a unit from your inventory, photograph it, and then return it to your inventory. Could even work out cheaper because normally when you send a product to a photographer on Fiverr, you do not get it back.

This service is currently only for the US marketplace. The below link works at this time, but if the page does not come up, log into your seller account and use the 'Help' feature to search for 'product photography'.

<https://www.amazon.com/b?ie=UTF8&node=18369505011>